- Schools are a safe haven for most students; however, intruders pose a serious threat to school safety.
- School staff should not be continually on the watch for intruders.
- Effective school policies and procedures, such as visitor check-in protocols, can greatly reduce intruder threats.
- There are many ways to offset faulty school design that contributes to school intruder threats.

Author

Robert Watson (Anderson, SC) is the founder and president of SafeSchools America, Inc. SafeSchools America guides and directs school districts in developing comprehensive school safety documents, conducts comprehensive school safety and security assessments, and coordinates crisis response training between the schools and the emergency community. Dr. Watson has authored numerous articles, videos, and books and was employed as a teacher and administrator for more than 25 years, serving eight years as a school superintendent.

Training Environments

SafeSchools is ideal for a blended learning environment, complementing in-service or video training, or as a stand-alone training course. The SafeSchools approach engages the learner in an e-learning environment; while a Compliance Management System automatically tracks his/her progress through the courses. This assists the district administrator or training coordinator in demonstrating compliance.
