

1,000,000 Course Completions for SafeSchools.com

Milestone helps mark six year anniversary for Cincinnati-based publishing company

Cincinnati, OH, October 28, 2008 -- Six years ago, almost to the day, SafeSchools.com was launched from an exhibitor booth at a trade show in Ohio. An online safety training system designed specifically for school district employees with three working courses - Bullying, Child Abuse, and Bloodborne Pathogens. The system came with a comprehensive reporting tool and the promise of more courses to come.

Total course completions for year one: 388

Now, six years and 9,999,622 course completions later, SafeSchools is the leading provider of online safety training to school districts across the country. Currently serving over 1,500 school districts with a library of more than 100 school-specific courses, it's clear they've come a long way. Their stable of authors is equally impressive, which includes some of the most recognized names in all areas of school safety.

"There are a lot of online training programs available these days – especially for safety issues," says Camille Martin, Director of Production. "We've been able to distinguish ourselves by working with leading school safety experts to develop content that is completely relevant to the K-12 environment. There just isn't any room for compromise when it comes to school safety."

Reaching 1,000,000 course completions is a clear sign that their steadfast approach to course development is working.

"We're absolutely thrilled about the growth we've experienced over the past six years," says Brian Taylor, CEO of Scenario Learning. "While a million course completions is an exciting business milestone, we're actually more excited about having helped to make schools safer places to work and learn."
